

Text4baby and WIC: Building on a Shared Mission

Text4baby Helps WIC Moms

Text4baby provides WIC clients with health messages and can even remind them about WIC appointments. In 2010, the National Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies Coalition started text4baby as a free texting service for pregnant women and moms with infants under age one. To sign up, women text BABY (or BEBE in Spanish) to 511411 and receive 3 free text messages each week, timed to their due date or baby's date of birth. There is no cost to sign up. Even if a woman does not have a text messaging plan, she can receive these free text4baby messages.

Reinforcing WIC Education

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Food and Nutrition Service (FNS), the National WIC Association (NWA), and local WIC agencies nationwide have partnered with text4baby to reinforce WIC nutrition education by providing evidence-based information and resources via 150-character text messages.

"Both text4baby and WIC share a common goal of helping pregnant women and new moms learn about the importance of healthcare and proper nutrition throughout their lifetime and the lifetime of their new baby. Texting is one of this generation's most popular forms of communication and text4baby is a wonderful, free, relevant service."

- You need calcium to build your baby's teeth and bones. Good sources of calcium are low-fat or fat-free milk, yogurt & hard cheese (like cheddar).
- A steady weight gain suggests your baby is growing. Ask your doctor or midwife (CNM/CM) what a safe weight gain is for you.
- Help protect your baby from illnesses like the flu. Breastfeed right after baby is born. Your milk can help fight disease & protect your baby.
- Soon you'll meet your baby! Did you know that if you qualify, WIC can help you with breastfeeding? To find a local WIC office, call 800-311-2229.
